CARRIED FROM CAPE HATTERAS BY THE GULF

STREAM—ARRIVAL OF THE BLACK HAWK.

The ship Black Hawk, one of the old Baltimore elippers of thirty years ago, arrived yesterday from Hamburg, after a stormy passage of thirty-eight days. The Black Hawk was onee considered one of the fastest clippers in the service. She was detained on this trip eight days in the British Channel by high west winds, her commander, Captain Haesloop, reported, and seven days more off the Newfoundland Banks among the icebergs. Two weeks after getting out of the Channel in midocean the Black Hawk sighted a wreck. There was no one on board; the masts had been all swept Away, everything was washed from the decks and the hatches were open and full of water. The weather being good Captain Haesloop sent off a crew in a boat to the wreck. Nothing was found on her, but it was discovered that she was the schooner The Twenty-one Friends which was run into off Cape Hatteras on March 23, by the schooner John H. May, from Philadelphia bound for Fernandina. A heavy fog prevailed at the time of the collision. The May rescued all the crew of the injured schooner which was illing rapidly, and they were obliged to abandon the vessel. The May was also badly damaged about the headgear and was obliged to put back to Philadelphia for repairs.

The Twenty-one Friends was a coast-line schooner and was owned by John J. Jeffries, of Somers Point, N. J. She was bound at the time of the collision from New-Brunswick for New-York, Several days after the accident the wreck was sighted by the schooner Frank M. McGear in latitude 360 32' and longitude 72° 58'. At that time she was drifting heavily and was water-logged. The mainmast and the mizzen-mast were gone, but the feremast and bow sprit were still standing; all her masts were washed away when the bulk was sighted by the Black Hawk on May 22. It had weathered some of the most severe storms of the season and was then in latitude 440 019 and longitude 41° 58'. In sixty days the wreck had drifted and been carried by the Gulf Stream about 2,000 miles. STREAM-ARRIVAL OF THE BLACK HAWK.

NEWS FROM THE SUBURBS.

ATTRIBUTING HER CURE TO FAITH. ATRIBUTING HER CURE TO FAITH.

Mrs. Alpha E. Watkins, who lives at South Orange, N.

J., asserts that she has been cured instantaneously of an incurable organic disease through the operation of the "Faith Cure." Yesterday Mrs. Watkins appeared at the Presbyterian Church in South Orange, and her recovery caused a sensation among her friends who knew of her infirmities. She appeared to be in perfect beatht. A Tensusk reporter visited the Rev. Mr.
Heller, of No. 48 Orchard st., Newark, Iwho ministered to Mrs. Watkins, and effected the cure. Mr. Heller said that it was true that Mrs. Watkins had been entirely enred and ty the laying on of hands and frayer. Mr.
Heller added that the cure was Ged's—cure and not his own for he had been only a humble instrument in the Divine hand.

Heller added that the cure was dod's cure and not his own for he had been only a humble instrument in the Divine hand.

Mrs. Watkins lives in a near cottage in Academy-st., in South Orange, and she was seen there in the afternoon by the reporter. She islof slender build, has dark expressive eyes and refined features. She was full of gratiant over her wonderful recovery and said: I had been ill for three years and some two years ago I had a fall which caused the most serious internal injuries. There were consistent the most serious internal injuries. There were consistent hemorrhages and theycould not be stopped I took a great deal of medicine but I only got worse and finally I was confined to my bed and I suffered greatly. I was in great agony last Sunday and I felt that my end was near. I had heard of Mr. Heller and his faith cures and I asked my husband to send for him. He come to the house on Monday and he questioned me about my faith and quoted passages from the Bible. Then he annotated me with oil by placing his hand on my forehead and he kneeled to pray and I united with him in an appeal to God. He left me after a few encouraging words. Before he had gone I felt a sense of relief in the affiliest organ and there was also a feeling of exaltation. I prayed and feeling renewed scrength I got upon my feet on the floor and wasked about. I have not had any pains since, and every day since Monday I have taken a walk out doors. On Thursday and Friday nights I attended prayer-incetings at the church.

JERSEY CITY SCHOOLS THAT ARE UNSAFE.

Several of the Jersey City schools are in a wretched condition, from a sanitary point of view. School No. 10 is unsafe and utterly unfit for use. The stairs are rotten, and in some places the children's feet have gone through the boards. The closets are not connected with the sewer and a sickening stench arises from them. School No. 13 is in a similar condition, and the foundation of No. 20 is falling to pieces. A new building is to be erected for this school, but it will be almost a year before it is completed. School No. 18 has been reported to the Board of Education as being in a shocking condition. An effort will be made to have the buildings repaired during the vacation. State Superintendent Chapman has requested the board to be particularly careful in taking the school census. He says that Hudson is the only county in the State which receives more money from the State School Fund than it pays in. It received $3,000 more last year and Superintendent Chapman believes that this is due to errors in the census. JERSEY CITY SCHOOLS THAT ARE UNSAFE.

MEETING THE WRONG CUSTOMER.

Thomas Ryan, age thirteen, of No. 102 At-Thomas Ryan, age thirteen, of No. 102 Atantic-ave, Brooklyn, met Policeman Patrick Vaughan, of the Eighth Sub-Precinct, who was in plain clothes, at Clinton-st, and Atlantic-ave. yesterday, and offered to sell him a sliver watch, No. 51, 108. The boy said that his father gave him the timepiece. Doubting his word the policeman took him to his father, who declared that he had never seen the watch before, but while he and the policeman were looking intently at it for any marks of identification the boy ran away. He was not found and the watch awaits its owner at the Brooklyn Police Headmarkers. PAYING DEARLY FOR HIS HEROISM

William F. McConnell, a clerk employed by the Board of Trade and Transportation, who was severely burned in attempting to rescue a woman from a burning building in East Fortieth-st., on May 27, is now out of danger but is still under treatment at the Believue Hospital. He was the first person to arrive at the fire and rushed into the building and up to the second floor to a room where there were cries for help. A child, which was sitting in a burning carriage, was carried out of the house. Then he ran back to save Mrs. Barnes, who was on an upper floor, and was seriously burned. Since then he has been in the hospital. He can only see from one eye, and will probably be disfigured for life.

AND MR, HARE BELIEVED IT!

Prom Studies in Rassia by Augustus Rave.

Mr. Morgan, a much respected Englishman at St. Petersburg. — was very fond of bear-hunting on the ice, but there was one bear so ferectous that no one would venture to go and kill it. At last Mr. Morgan persuaded three peasants to go with him. The hunters wear long boots on the ice, fastened to pieces of wood several feet in length, and the wood is en rollers. [Here Mm. Hare must be tlanking of snow-shoes. Rollers would be no use, for the simple reason that the ice is generally covered by some two or three feet of snow.] Then they stride Cat, and away they go at fifty miles an hour. Mr. Morgan was rushing thas along the ice, and the pensants after him, when out came the bear. He lived, and the onlined fell. Then, thinking the bear sumortally wounded, he discharged his other pistol, and immediately after the bear jumped up and rushed at him. He had given his knife to one pensant and his stick to another to hold, and when he looked round, both [sie] the peasants had fied, and he was quite defenceles. In his hoots he could not turn, be could only make a circuit, so he jumped out of them and tried to sink into the snow. He sand, but unfortunately not entirely, for the tep of his head remained above the snow. The bear came and tore off the top of his head and both his cyclids, then it hobbied away; but the cold was so great, Mr. Morgan searcely felt any pain.

By and-by the peasants returned, and he heard them say: "There is 'he bear sunk into the snow, now we can kill him." Mr. Morgan cailed out, "Oh, no, indeed, I am not the bear," and they came and dug him out. But when they saw what a stale he was in, they said, "Well, now it is evident that you must, die, so we must leave you, but we kill make you a fine that you may die com fortably, for, as for carrying you five days journey back to St. Petersburg, that is quite impossible. "But Mr. Morgan offered the peasants so large a reward if they consented, and they picked up the eyelids, sond carried

"We at once surrounded the barn [said Captain E. P. Doberty] and I went to the door and tried to open it, but it was locked with a paalock. Young Garrett had the key to the padiock with him, and, when he unlocked it, I called out to the men inside:

end of Sixteenth-st. Secretary Endicott is, I should say, notwithstanding newspaper reports in favor of Mr Whittey to the colitrary, the richest member of the Cabinet. He got a nice little satate from his father, and his wife brought him a big fortune. She was the daughter of George Peabody, the noted millionaire philantropist, who gave away more millions than he left, but who, nevertheless, left $5,000,000. Mr Endicott is her husband's lirst cousin, and both she and the Secretary are a sort of forty-second cousin of the President, one of their fenale ancestral relatives having married "Father Cleveland," the great incle of Grover Cleveland. Mrs. Endicott is well up in society matters, and she says she likes Washinston very much. She is a tail, blonde, rosey-checked woman with a bright eye and a pleasant smile. Her father, George Peabody, was born near Salem and started life as a merchant's clerk. He afterward got a place here at Georgetown, and made his first stroke toward his fortune by going into partnership with Elisha Riggs to sell goods. Both of these men made great fortunes, and Peabody's daughter now ceines back at the head of the society in which her father started as a clerk seventy years ago. The Endicotts have rented Senator Pendicton's house on Sixteenth-st., Just above Don Cameton's bouse, and I suppose it costs them about $5,000 a year rent. It is a Queen Anne of Pompelian red brick, and its interfor is beautifully inished in combinations of paint and natural woods.
